This Fifteenth Edition is revised and includes nearly 4,000 names and more than 500 signatures.

Who's Who in Art is compiled from information personally provided by the artists and writers concerned, and it includes details about many outstanding exponents of art whose biographical details are unobtainable elsewhere. It enjoys a supreme advantage in the collection of data from British artists, material which has been compiled with the assistance of all leading artists' clubs and societies and publishers of art books in Britain and the Commonwealth.

In the International field a representative selection of the most outstanding contemporaries eligible for inclusion has been compiled with the assistance of cultural officers in embassies and legations.

Who's Who in Art is designed to add interest and understanding to your visits to exhibitions of contemporary art, to your perusal of current comment and reproductions of the art of our time and to enable you to appreciate more fully the man behind the picture and the book.

PUBLISHER'S NOTES

IN COMPILING Who's Who in Art it is our aim to produce a truly comprehensive list of biographical details of living artists in Britain today.

This is a tremendous task when one thinks of the number of art forms and mediums which now exist, and indeed it is often very difficult to decide whether a subject is art at all. How does one define art? There are, of course, many art forms, but we are concerned only with the visual arts. This narrows the field, perhaps, slightly, but it is none the less still very wide.

We have concluded that Who's Who in Art should embrace exponents of all forms of painting and drawing, graphic art and sculpture in their widest forms and in any mediums.

One of the criticisms always levied at "Who's Who"-type publications is that many famous names are excluded. The omission of well-known names is most regrettable, but we are limited to those artists who wish their names to appear.

A former Editor of early editions of Who's Who in Art was personally acquainted with a prominent contemporary painter, but he had the utmost difficulty in persuading him to include his particulars. If by any chance there are any artists of repute in Britain today who have never been approached by us, we can only apologize for the oversight and hope that if they should read these Publisher's Notes they will inform us of the omission so that they may appear in the next edition of Who's Who in Art, which will be published in 1972.

Who's Who in Art is principally concerned with British artists, and so far as overseas artists are concerned we include only a representative selection of the most outstanding contemporaries.

All the entries in the last edition have been submitted to the individuals concerned and any corrections or additions sent in by them have been incorporated in the Fifteenth Edition. We have approached numerous additional artists, and many new names appear for the first time. We always welcome applicants and names of artists recommended by others.

Exactly the same procedure has been followed as in the compilation of former editions. We gratefully acknowledge the kind assistance of all who have contributed information, including the various societies, art galleries and numerous individuals who have helped us in this edition.

Production difficulties always frustrate the publisher's aim to ensure that a publication is absolutely up to date, and the readers' indulgence is asked if some of the latest dates and changes have evaded this issue. Unfortunately, several months must elapse between the closing dates for accepting revision of entries and final publication.

Free Painters and Sculptors (F.P.S.)

This Society was founded in 1952 by a group of artists interested in contemporary painting and sculpture, with the object of providing increased opportunities for the general public to view representative exhibitions of art of a high standard. Many of its founder members belonged to the Institute of Contemporary Arts, and F.P.S. continues to retain strong links with that body. The term "Free" indicates that a wide variety of styles and of differing artistic allegiances can be accepted, providing the standard is sufficiently high.

An annual exhibition is held in London, and includes the work of non-members. A special feature is the organization of provincial or travelling exhibitions which reach all parts of the British Isles, the object of these being to bring before the public a balanced cross-section of the international art scene.

Associate Membership (£2 2s. annually) may be applied for by anyone interested in the visual arts, and after election by the Executive Committee painters and sculptors may submit examples of their work with a view to qualifying for Full Membership. A limited proportion of Members can also be raised to the status of Fellow.

F.P.S. is an incorporated body and is registered under the Charities Act. It is a member of L'Association Internationale des Arts Plastiques (affiliated to U.N.E.S.C.O.), and is also represented on the City of Westminster Arts Council.

This Club was formed in 1867 to advance the cause of and stimulate interest in art in all its branches by means of exhibitions of works of art, life classes, the acquisition of publications on art, lectures on art subjects, and by such other means as the Council may decide from time to time. Consequently, the Club's membership comprises painters, sculptors, architects and artist craftsmen as Artist Members and gentlemen interested in art as Lay Members. To be admitted to Artist Membership, candidates must submit examples of their work for the approval of the Artist Members. Painters, sculptors and artist craftsmen pay on admission an entry fee of £5 5s., and Lay Members pay £15 15s., but actors, authors, dramatists and musicians who are Lay Members pay £5 5s.

With the object of attracting further patronage of the arts by industry, the Society of Aviation Artists decided to expand its scope to include in the annual exhibition painters of industrial subjects, and adopting the title "Industrial Painters' Group." The Group has permanent headquarters and a staff available to advise industrialists and introduce them to painters capable of meeting their requirements. The annual exhibition is held at the London Guildhall and the work of non-members is shown.

The Summer Exhibitions, of the work of living artists, have been held annually since 1769. Other Exhibitions, frequently of Old Masters, date from 1870. The Royal Academy has never received any subsidy from the State. It is an independent, self-supporting institution, under the patronage of the Crown, and its activities are directed by its Members (Painters, Engravers, Sculptors and Artists) who serve in rotation on the Council. The President is elected annually.

This Institute was founded in 1862, and has now over 1,000 Members. Its object is "to promote a taste for art generally, and more especially to encourage contemporary art; to further the diffusion of artistic and aesthetic knowledge, and to aid the study, advancement and development of art in its applications." Towards the attainment of this object, the Institute holds annual exhibitions in the McLellan Galleries, Glasgow, and shows from 600 to 700 works in all mediums. The Membership fee is a single payment of £5 5s., but if under twenty-six years of age, £1 1s.

Royal Hibernian Academy

The Academy was incorporated by Charter in 1823 with the intention of encouraging the fine arts in Ireland by giving Irish artists the opportunity of exhibiting their works annually. It was reorganized under a new Charter in 1861 and enlarged to thirty Constituent Members, and up to the present time has consistently fulfilled its original aims.

In 1824 Francis Johnston, P.R.H.A., endowed the Academy with a house and exhibition gallery in Lower Abbey St. This was later enlarged by his widow, and again by Sir Thomas Jones, P.R.H.A., who erected a school for the study of the antique and living model, where many of the future artists received their training. The Academy House and Exhibition Galleries were destroyed by fire during Easter Week, 1916, and the Academy was without premises until 1939, when it acquired the house and garden of 15 Ely Place with the intention of erecting an exhibition hall and school when it had the funds to do so.

The Academy has encouraged and developed art in Ireland since its foundation. It has given the Irish artist his status; and the present position of Irish Art can be said to be the outcome of the encouragement it has afforded to Irish men and women of talent and the part it has taken in art affairs generally in the country. There is hardly an Irish artist of note living or dead who has not been a member of the Academy or who has not benefited in one way or another by its activities.
